Mainstream systematic theology, both Protestant and Catholic, has mostly marginalized or ignored the gift of prophecy. This book argues that prophecy has persisted in Christianity as an inherent and continuous feature in the life of the church. Prophecy never died but rather proved its dynamism by mutating to meet new historical conditions.

While Old Testament prophecy usually kept its proper name—prophecy— Christian prophecy was, as we shall see, at least after the Montanist crisis degraded to designations such as private revelations or epiphenomena of the mystical life, or simply relegated to the broader category of Christian mysticism. However, such terms do not give enough credit to Christ's free choice of addressing his people for designs of which only he knows the importance.

A prophet is not a soothsayer; the essential element of the prophet is not the prediction of future events. The prophet is someone who tells the truth on the strength of his contact with God—the truth for today, which also, naturally, sheds light on the future. It is not a question of foretelling the future in detail, but of rendering the truth of God present at this moment in time and of pointing us in the right direction.
