GSIC - Global Service Information Center
Until the mid-1960s, in the years leading up to Toyota's global emergence, service activities largely consisted of technical service training. Subsequently, as global markets expanded and vehicle sales surged, high-tech state-of-the-art products and technologies, and overseas production grew, Toyota focused on making continual improvements to its servicing systems in order to put local customers first and provide the best customer service in each city and town.
